In recognition of the great work of teams we are introducing the Team Impact Awards. The purpose of the Team Impact Awards is to recognize and reward those teams that make significant contributions to the work and mission of the Institute. Teams who receive the award should be able to demonstrate that their work impacted and supported the research and/or education programs at the Institute.

Caltech is comprised of many teams working collaboratively to accomplish amazing things.

The Thomas W. Schmitt Annual Staff Prize is presented annually to a Caltech staff member whose contributions embody the values and spirit that enable the Institute to achieve excellence in research and education.

The idea for an annual staff prize was conceived and nurtured by former Associate Vice President for Human Resources Tom Schmitt shortly after he arrived at Caltech in 1997. Tom realized that, unlike Caltech faculty and students who are frequently recognized for their achievements, there was no formal recognition of Caltech staff. When senior administrators set out to raise money for an endowment to fund such a prize, a benefactor was found in Ted Jenkins—Caltech alumnus, trustee, and strong supporter of Caltech staff.

Ted began his career in 1966 at Fairchild Semiconductor Research and Development Laboratories as a process engineer, and then moved to Intel Corporation in 1968, where he held a variety of positions until his retirement in 1999. Since then, Ted has served as president of the Caltech Alumni Association (2001–2002) and president of the Caltech Associates (2004–2005). Ted is a tireless advocate for policies that create a positive work environment and acknowledge the importance of staff members to Caltech’s success. Caltech is grateful for Ted’s generosity in making this prize possible.
